

"Mose" at the Broadway Theater.

The sketch of Mose, which is now nightly produced at the Broadway Theater, is truly admirable. We allude, not to the play—which is slight, patched, and absurd—but to Mr. Chanfrau's personation of the principal character. The play of "Mose" was first acted nearly twenty years ago at Mitchell's Olympic Theater. In the beginning, it was an accident. A club had been formed among the members of the theatrical company, each member being required to furnish either a caricature-drawing of something that had occurred upon the stage, or, in default of this, a story or song. Mr. Chanfrau, then a member of the company, not being a caricaturist, used to tell stories in his turn, embodying incidents, both real and fanciful, from the everyday, out-of-door life of New-York City. The Fire-Boy, or Bowery Mose, figured largely in these stories, and it was observed that Mr. Chanfrau—whose talent at mimicry is remarkably happy and active—reproduced the Fire-Boy with perfectly life-like verisimilitude. The stage-manager, therefore, one day surprised Mr. Chanfrau with the intelligence that he had written out all the latter's stories, partaking of the Bowery element, and fashioned them into a sort of drama, for production on the Olympic stage. The piece was duly submitted to Mr. Mitchell, but did not win his approbation, and so was put upon the shelf. Sometime afterward, Mr. Baker's name being up for a benefit, he resolved to produce his neglected drama. It was, thereupon, revised and duly prepared by Mr. Chanfrau and himself, and was performed. The first representation passed off quietly, before a small audience. The next night, in deference to a rule of this theater, the same bill was repeated. By this time, the Bowery boys had heard of "Mose," and, on the second night, the theater and all the neighboring streets were densely crowded with an eager multitude. Not long after that, "Mose" was running at two theaters. Mr. Chanfrau being its representative at both; and he has played the part continually, in every portion of this country, with never-failing success. Such was the singular origin of a piece which has kept the stage for nearly 20 years, and which, properly revised and modernized, to suit contemporary taste and intelligence, might be made immensely popular and profitable at the moment.

The version which has been produced at the Broadway, as an after-piece to "Sam," is comprised in two acts, and is totally devoid of sequence in the scenes and of interest in the story—the parts being merely hitched together for the purpose of displaying the principal character. This latter, however, as personated by Mr. Chanfrau, is so thoroughly true to life, and so full of fun, that we can but regret, amid his amusement, that it is not provided with better surroundings. Mose appears in his traditional red flannel shirt and black trousers, with his long side-locks, and stove-pipe hat tipped forward, and blowing cigar; and his talk is the slang of the fire boys of olden times—perhaps of to-day. No person can miss the truth of the picture, nor fail to be amused at the incidental sketches of the roguery of New-York sharpers, practiced on the innocent countryman. There are, it must be added, traits of vulgarity in the piece, which are to be immediately expunged—notably the duet sung by the two girls in the street, which is extremely distasteful, without being in the least funny. Finally, we must not be understood to rank Mose among high efforts in art. The mere reproduction of real life, in dramatic form, is never very difficult, since it does not involve the higher faculties of the mind. Mr. Chanfrau's personation of Mose, however, is, as we have said, admirable for its exactness, and its sympathetic vivacity. The play of "Mose" begins at the Broadway, at a few minutes after 10 o'clock in the evening.

Let not Mr. De Walden's benefit be forgotten. To-morrow night "Sam" and "Mose" will both be performed.

"Love's Sacrifice" at Wallack's Theater.

Love's Sacrifice, wherever seen, is pathetic. It asserts the supremacy of the soul over the passions, and, therefore, the possible dignity of human nature—which, aside from its occasional capacity for self-interest through love, is not greatly calculated to inspire respect. Indeed, there are a few statements so profoundly true as that, which some of us make once a week, to the effect that we are miserable wretches; and it is only the memory of some Col. Newcome, or Little Nell, or Matthew Elinore, that reconciles us to the condition by suggesting the good side of a bad subject. Hence the pleasure, such as it is, of seeing Love's Sacrifice at Wallack's Theater, and which was performed last night for the purpose of introducing Mr. James V. Wallack in the part of Matthew Elinore. The character is admirably fitted to Mr. Wallack's peculiar mold of mind, in which intensity of emotion and warmth and richness of imagination are conspicuous elements. Elinore is a man of noble mind and generous heart, whose life is darkened by the consciousness of one wrong, or, at least, an unfortunate action, for which all his after conduct is a penance. The workings of this secret anguish, and the sacrifice which his noble nature entails upon itself, in atonement for past evil, are depicted in the drama—as everybody knows, for every body must have seen it—in the course of an interesting love story. Mr. Wallack delineates the character with great individuality, and, in certain pathetic parts, his naturalness of grief goes straight to the heart. The quality of repose, marked and admirable, in all his acting—at least, if we may judge by recent personations—is strangely brought out in this one; so that, in absolute silence, he is at times profoundly eloquent. The performance should be seen by all who love to study a careful effort in the dramatic art. Mr. Wallack has put the piece on the stage with his accustomed taste, and the cast of parts is uncommonly good. Mr. Fisher was the warmest applause for his vivacious and humorous St. Louis. Mr. Gilbert is a most specious and offensive and therefore admirable villain, as Paul Lafont; Mr. Holston displays his accustomed comic humor, as Jean Ruse; Miss Henriques is an excellent Margaret Elinore, evincing, as she does, real feeling, and playing in several scenes, with quiet dignity and taste; and Miss Burke is delightfully arch and piquant as Hermine. The drama of "Love's Sacrifice" will be repeated on Friday. This evening, "Secrets Worth Knowing" will be repeated. "The Poor Gentleman" is in rehearsal at this theater; but the next real novelty will be Tom Taylor's "Henry Dunbar." Let us hope the play will be less prosy than his title.

ADRIET.—Capt. Phelps of the United States Revenue Steamer One, picked up, yesterday afternoon near the Narrows, a skiff, about 14 feet long, containing a negro boy about 15 years of age, who, no doubt, would be a good deal of use to the revenue.
